

SOME GIRLS AND OTHERS.

Press and Poetry in Which the Charm and Weaknesses of the Sex Are Set Forth.

To the Editor:
Answer to "Sweet Anna." I would advise you to wait about five more years and by that time I think you will have your full number of years, for judging by the way your letter reads you have not yet. Remember you cannot get on love, as yet you do not know any more about love than a dog knows about a white shirt on the Fourth of July. Hoping this will stop you from asking silly questions and not offend your sweet-soul, I remain your adviser, IRO.

Sweet Anna.
To the Editor:
Would I were an eyelash
Upon your dear blue eyes,
Then would I have bright sunshine
Throughout the day and by.
Could I, oh! only be the cup
From which you oftentimes drink,
Oh! then I'd always take a kiss
Or more—well, I should think.

If you would only give me, dear,
The "Yes" I've asked of you,
Then you might call me foolish,
But I wouldn't think it true.

Wants a Fat Girl and Advice.
To the Editor:
I am a young man of thirty and would like to become acquainted with a jolly fat girl. Knowing some of my acquaintances, I appeal to your readers for advice. ANTI-LEAN.

He Always Disappoints Her.
To the Editor:
What do you think of a young man who is always disappointing the young lady he is keeping company with for nearly four years, and has asked to marry him? The girl thinks he loves her and means to marry her, but I don't think he cares much about her when he stays away so long without any reason on her part. ANXIOUS MOTHER.

Under a White Fedora Hat.
To the Editor:
Yes! he is handsome. Oh! so handsome. As handsome as can be. And such a gallant fellow. With grace to light and free. You should see him on a Sunday. With his white Fedora hat. He is really fascinating. (Though his middle name is Pat). With a charming countenance. A diamond in his cravat. He is a duke from Chicago town. With his white Fedora hat. And the girls they can't resist him. When they see him dressed in that. Because he's strictly "out of sight." In his white Fedora hat. And the fellows they're all jealous. So, when you hear them shouting raucous, They're mad because they haven't. Any white Fedora hat. KITTIE B.

A Love Letter.
To the Editor:
What do you think of this for a love letter: Dearest Lizzie,
My love is stronger than the smell of coffee, potent butter, or the kick of a young cow. Benadon of exquisite love go through me like a hot iron through an army of men, and I feel as if I could lift myself by my boot straps to the height of a church steeple. As the man who has been a sweet milk, so do I hanker after your presence. And as the goodling swimmer in a mud puddle, so do I yearn for you. And the fellows they're all jealous. So, when you hear them shouting raucous, They're mad because they haven't. Any white Fedora hat. KITTIE B.

Wants to Shake the Blonde.
To the Editor:
I am a young man, twenty-seven years old, and well to do. Not long ago I was introduced to a good-looking blonde whose friendship I have appreciated very much ever since, with the result that by hook or by crook, she thinks I am maritally inclined. Now, what I want to know is
